

Andrew Jones

Principal Consultant

Andrew Jones is a leadership development consultant and accredited coach with a wealth of experience designing and facilitating development programs and materials. Over eighteen years Andrew has dedicated himself to improving the self-awareness, performance and ongoing effectiveness of leaders, teams and organisations in Australia and internationally.

In his work with leaders, one of Andrew's focal points is to improve organisational productivity through facilitating an understanding of complex cultural dynamics. The practical outcome is the development of a range of relational leadership skills and insights that facilitate further staff engagement. This passion has taken Andrew to Asia, India and Africa in various leadership development and empowerment roles. In Australia he has worked closely with many large and small, government and private organisations.

Andrew is a gregarious and perceptive facilitator able to engage participants at every organisational level. He has significant experience working with emerging leaders through to executive leadership, in the public, private and not-for-profit sectors, providing real solutions to genuine felt needs.

Andrew is an accredited facilitator of the MLQ Plus suite of individual and team based assessment tools. Courage and trust are required for the leader to submit to the scrutiny of the process and Andrew maintains an emotionally safe and comfortable process with complete confidentiality for every participant.
